New? York State the traveler at one time knew when he went from one county into another by the difference in the surface of the road, but since the State has taken over the supervision of the maintenance of roads, that condition has been eliminated. Such a condition will eventually confront Virginia, is his opinion, and the method used in New York will be the most satisfactory solution.

Work of Morning Session.

At the morning session V. M. Pierce, if the United State Office of Public coads, expressed his opinion that the macrete road, when properly contracted, is far superior to the macreted is far superior to the macreted that the permanent system which to be built in Virginia should be this material.
